

In September 2011 I left for Russia and a hunt for Kuban (Western) tur with ProfiHunt. This was a very good hunt conducted by Alexy Maximov, the representative for ProfiHunt. The issues with the Caucasus Mountains have been well outlined in this publication and don't need to be repeated; however, I don't think they are as difficult as the Himalayas. Bryan Bailey from Washington was also along on this trip. We were both successful taking very nice tur. The weather significantly changed with a winter storm that made getting off the mountain and back to base camp desirable. There had been a plan to hunt chamois, but the weather convinced us to head back to Moscow where I was able to head to Croatia for my planned hunt for European mouflon and Balkan chamois.
